Make a Difference in Rhode Island

Join the State Rehabilitation Council (SRC)

The Rhode Island State Rehabilitation Council (SRC) is seeking new members who are passionate about improving employment opportunities and vocational rehabilitation services for individuals with disabilities.

As an SRC member, you will:

- Provide advice and recommendations to the Office of Rehabilitation Services (ORS).
- Help shape policies and priorities that improve employment outcomes for people with disabilities.
- Collaborate with individuals, families, employers, service providers, educators, advocates, and state partners.
- Bring your experience, perspective, and ideas to help strengthen Rhode Island's vocational rehabilitation system.

We Welcome Members from Diverse Backgrounds

The SRC values a broad range of experiences and perspectives. We encourage applications from individuals who represent or have experience with:

- People with disabilities.
- Current or former recipients of vocational rehabilitation services.
- Family members, advocates, and community leaders.
- Employers, business, industry, and labor organizations.
- Education, workforce development, and healthcare professionals.
- Community rehabilitation programs, independent living organizations, and disability service providers.
- Tribal organizations, if applicable.
- Other individuals committed to advancing competitive integrated employment for people with disabilities.

No prior board experience is required—only an interest in making a meaningful difference.
